FONTHILL MUSEUM FEATURED IN
MARTHA STEWART LIVING MAGAZINE

DOYLESTOWN, PA (September 7, 2007) – Fonthill, the castle-like home of Doylestown native and tile maker, Henry Mercer, is featured in this month's (September) issue of Martha Stewart Living Magazine. The home was chosen to be showcased in the magazine's column, "American Treasures." The five-page article details how Mercer constructed his house and decorated the rooms with his signature tiles. The magazine photographed the home back in April.

Fonthill Site Manager, Edward Reidell, said he hopes the national exposure in Martha Stewart Living will translate into increased attendance to the house museum. "We've had a positive response to the article. A couple from Waco, Texas saw the article and immediately flew out here to tour the home," said Reidell.

The September issue of Martha Stewart Living magazine is currently on newsstands.
